

Homestead Value Fund (HOVLX)

Quality Value Approach

Homestead Funds' large-cap strategy employs a disciplined quality value approach, which seeks long-term growth of capital for the long-term investor. Historically this approach has been resilient during periods of market underperformance as we closely monitor both portfolio and individual security risks to try to limit volatility and maximize risk-adjusted long-term returns.

The foundation of our investment approach is based on three pillars that seek to identify companies that have robust business models, strong management teams and attractive valuations.

Our Three-Pillar Framework

Business Quality: We seek high-quality businesses that have common characteristics across industries. These companies demonstrate competitive advantages, strong cash flows and operational resilience.

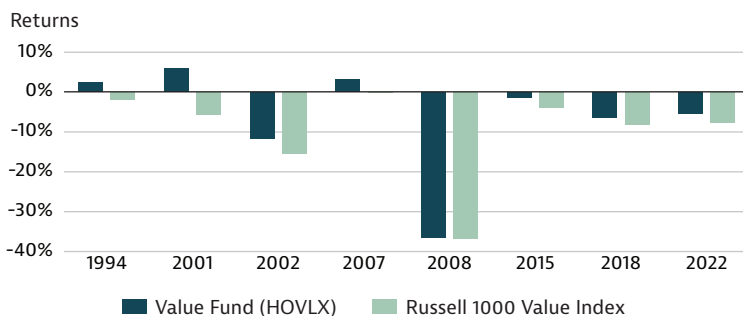

Management Quality: A company's business quality depends on its leadership. We seek managers with proven capital allocation skills, strategic vision and a record of creating shareholder value.

Valuation Quality: Investing when the market value is below our assessment of intrinsic value offer a potential for growth and helps drive returns. We evaluate each stock by comparing its current price to our projections, peer valuations and historical valuations.

The Result: Outperformance When It Matters the Most

Over the past 30 years, the integration of these three pillars has delivered outperformance every year that the Russell 1000 Value Index was down, as shown below. When markets decline, the Value Fund has historically experienced fewer drawdowns than its benchmark, preserving capital during stress periods.

Drawdowns are a change between an investment or fund's price peak and trough before it recovers to the initial peak.

Equity securities generally have greater price volatility than fixed-income securities. The market price of equity securities may go up or down, sometimes rapidly or unpredictably. Equity securities may decline in value due to factors affecting the issuer or equity securities markets generally. Value stocks are subject to the risk that returns on stocks within this style category will trail returns of stocks representing other styles or the market overall over any period of time and may shift in and out of favor with investors generally, sometimes rapidly, depending on changes in market, economic, and other factors. Investments in value securities may be subject to risks, among others, that (1) the issuer's potential business prospects will not be realized; (2) their potential values will not be recognized by the market; and (3) they will not perform as anticipated.

The Russell 1000 Value Index measures the performance of those Russell 1000 companies with lower price-to-book ratios and lower forecasted growth values. Indices are unmanaged, and investors cannot invest directly in an index. Unless otherwise noted, performance of indices does not account for any fees, commissions or other expenses that would be incurred. Returns include reinvested dividends.

Index funds are subject to tracking risk, the risk that the fund's return will not closely track the return of the index. Indices are unmanaged, and investors cannot invest directly in an index. Unless otherwise noted, performance of indices does not account for any fees, commissions or other expenses that would be incurred. Returns include reinvested dividends.

Investing in any mutual funds, including the Homestead Funds involves risk, including the possible loss of principal.
